

The bee's life is like a magic well:
the more you draw from it, the more it fills with water

- Karl Von Frisch

"Teaching is a mother of all other professions"
Many believe this quote to be true. Teaching is the backbone of society, and of all other professions.
Even teachers needed teachers.

Teamwork & Communication.

Teamwork can lead to greater productivity and a broader perspective. It also requires team members to communicate effectively.

Responsibility & Patience.

Be responsible, productive, diligent, and effective. Time lost can never be regained. You will meet different individuals with different abilities and personalities which could easily lead to frustration. Exercise patience to ensure that you don't feel intimidated or intimidated by others with different abilities.

Respect & Kindness.

Mutual respect and kindness can help to overcome pre-judgment and stereotypes, and consequently boost confidence. Consider how your "bee-havior" will impact others and the environment; understand your role and how it can contribute to the hive (group/-school/organization), and the environment.

Integrity & Honesty.

You are a human being who doesn't know everything, so be honest in your interaction with others. This could rub off on others to accept that all can make mistakes and learn from them. Be consistent and uncompromising in your conduct.

Fairness & Hope.

Promote equality and non-discrimination and avoid favoritism. Treat all fairly. Have compassion, forgive, and remain hopeful that you and others can succeed.

Manage Change.

Don't "bee" complacent, "bee" innovative for future success. Bee" alert for potential opportunities and threats; and "bee" ready and willing to make quick decisions in a rapidly changing environment.

Rest.

'Busy bees' need enough time to rest and recharge. Never feel guilty about taking time-out to rest. Insufficient rest will negatively impact your productivity, effectiveness, and your interaction with others.
